

Jupiter and Neptune as seen in a small telescope that uses a diagonal mirror. This is two hours after sunset (6:15 pm EST) on Dec, 21, 2009 as seen from mid-northern latitudes. Look in the southwest, below the crescent moon to see with your naked eye. Binoculars may reveal Neptune, but it will be up and to the right of Jupiter in binoculars.

1 Degree